

GABRIEL, THE SON OF RAFAEL

by Eleni-Marianthi Mendoza

Gabriel was the son of Rafael, a rich businessman and manager of a successful computer company in Argentina. Rafael died only a few months before the start of the play because he fell down and hit his head. After Rafael's death, his brother, Saruman, became the manager of the company himself and married Christine, Rafael's widow. Young Gabriel was worried about his father's death. His aunt Marilyn and Saruman's sister told him that Saruman killed his father. So Marilyn gave him a gun and Gabriel killed his uncle. His mum was so angry that she killed Christine with the same gun. But there was poison on the gun, so Christine died, too.
