

BE MORE TOLERANT

Our students from Greece, Turkey, Portugal, and Spain teamed up for the "Inclusion Under Tolerance" activity of November . They used a cool tool called Answergarden to share what inclusion means to them after working on this project for a while.

At first, they thought inclusion was just about being there. But as they kept going with the project in their schools, their ideas changed. Now, they see inclusion as something much bigger. It's like a beautiful picture made of different pieces. To them, inclusion means being kind, respecting each other, and celebrating what makes each person special. It's like making a place where everyone feels like they really belong and matter. They learned that inclusion is about listening to each other, understanding differences, and making sure everyone feels important.

Their Answergarden showed how much they've learned and how their ideas about inclusion have grown. They've come a long way, discovering that inclusion is about making everyone feel welcome and valued, no matter how different they are.
