GAMES

FEBRUARY 2010

Welcome to our yard
We 'll present you some games that we used to play when we were young .
Our children continue to play these games in the yard till now.
These games played in school yards, in parks or in any open space.
So, you can follow the orders and play these games in your school yard or anywhere else.
Have fun!!!

The wolf and the lamb

The children take out to see who is the lamb and who is the wolf. After caught in a circle. Inside the circle is the lamb and out of the circle stands the wolf.

The wolf is trying to get in, but children of-download their hands as it is caught and back. At some point in the cycle, but some children may decide to leave the wolf to enter. So lift the hands caught the wolf and passes through.

The lamb constantly monitor the movements of the wolf and the moods of children. When we see the wolf comes to media, attempting to break it off immediately. The wolf tries again to get out, so the lamb again resort means.

The game ends when the wolf catches the lamb.

THE APPLES

Children make two lines apart to 10-15 meters (depending on the number and age of players).

By Kourbani Counting-out game or two down the kids who stand outside, one on each line, the other, a team will move into the space defined by two lines.

The children who are out throwing the ball trying to hit one of the children inside. If you click no, the other child from catching the ball across and fast, before I n 'players away, the casts, either marking or some indiscriminately into the crowd.

As players who are in struggle with the ball, move the child to throw and gathered close to each other. But then the child with the ball instead of throw up their children, is likely to send it straight to the opposite. What if the catch immediately, can easily find and view even hit not just one child but two or more, as they have gathered close to him not providing this strategic maneuver.

Any child beaten and burned leaves the game. Any child catching the ball wins a 'apple', equivalent to a "life". If a child has already hit an apple, can buy this "life", ie remain, losing the apple. Generally, those apples is so often the player can escape. But it has the right to donate the apple of someone which is very frequent, as the most capable children may have two three a.m. apples.

Usually a child remains in the final. If two children are outside shed a total of ten times the ball without being hit, or if you achieve this but it has apple eliminates the burning, then the child and the whole team was in winning - and the children are forced to outside ever again.
