

A young artist

Once there was a young boy named Erick. He liked drawing and he wanted to be famous.

One day he was crossing the street with some of his drawings, when he saw someone who looked familiar. That man was a famous artist. Erick knew few things about him. His name was Brayan Bell. Erick came close to him and he told him how much he admired his work. That moment Brayan noticed Erick's sketches and asked if Erick was an artist too. Erick was surprised because he didn't believe that his drawings were good enough. So, Brayan offered to help him, and he gave Erick some art lessons for free. After a while Erick became a popular artist and many people bought his paintings. His dream came true.

One day Brayan said:

"Now you are a successful young artist! Come on let's celebrate. I 'll buy you a cake"!