Palace Alhambra

Half a fort, half a palace and half a garden, the Alhambra (Red Fortress) is set on a plateau overlooking the city of Granada in southern Spain. The palace was built in the 14th century by Moorish monarchs and today the Alhambra is one of the most important sights in Spain with many visiting the city, mainly to see this fortress up close. In 1984 the Alhambra, along with Generalife and Albaicín, were recognized as a UNESCO World Heritage Site

La Concha Protected from strong winds with steep cliffs and surrounding islands, La Concha in San Sebastian is known as one of the best urban beaches in Europe, let alone in Spain. You can surf, walk along the beach in search of the best restaurants and of course enjoy the beautiful view of the landscape
