

FANIS STYMFALIADIS

Mass planting and restoration of trees around the world, which will increase their number by almost a third compared to today which means up to one trillion extra trees will be the most effective and economical way to "brake" mankind climate change and save valuable time, until it finds other solutions to drastically reduce "greenhouse gas" emissions.