

IRISES

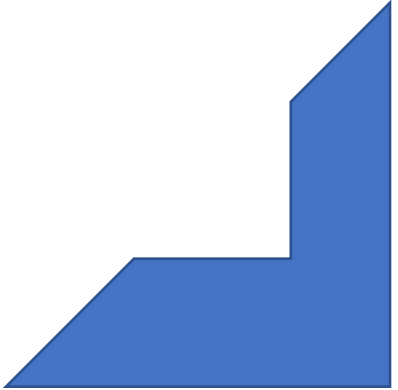

BY

VINCENT

VAN GOGH

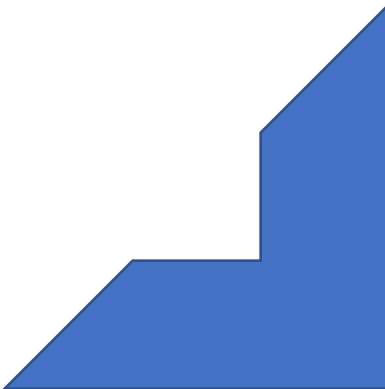

Important paint

- Irises is one of several paintings by the Dutch artist Vincent Van Gogh who created this painting before his death in 1890.

Idea and philosophy

- He called painting “the lighting conductor for my illness “ because he felt that he could keep himself from going insane by continuing to paint

Design way

- This similarities occur with strong outline, unusual angles, including close-up views, and also flattish local color. The painting is full of soft nest and lightness. Irises is full of life without tragedy

Influence

- The painting was probably influenced by Japanese like many of his works and those by other artists of the time
