Greece

Greece is in the south-east of Europe. Every year tourists visit Greece to see its archaeological sights. One of them is the Acropolis of Athens with the Parthenon. This is a monument that reminds us of the glory of democracy in Athens. Also, there is the Palace of Knossos, which used to be the capital of the Minoan State.

Except for its archaeological sights, Greece has numerous islands with beautiful beaches. Islands like Paros, Mykonos, and Corfu have clean beaches and are waiting for you!!!!

Greek sights

The Parthenon : This monument was structured to honour Goddess Athina. It was made in the 5th century B.C. Its architects were Iktinos and Kallikratis. It was made of marble. It is a piece of jewellery for Greeks and for the whole world.

The theatre of Epidavros: It was structured by Polyklitos. It was created to honour Asklipios. This theatre is more beautiful and in better condition than all other ancient theatres in Greece.

Reporting from our school: Interview with our school headmaster

Students: How many years have you been teaching?

Mrs Giota Plomaritou: I was appointed in 1987

S: What were schools like in the past?

Mrs P: There are few differences with the schools of the past. The basic difference has to do with the school subjects. In the past students didn't do music, art, or ICT.

S: Can you tell us some of your childhood memories at school?

Mrs P: I always liked school, although times were hard. I will always remember Mr Vasilis, my first teacher. He sang and played with us. He arranged our desks in a horseshoe, so that everyone could see everyone else. My teachers loved their job. Mr Elias, our headteacher was stricter. He liked science and made many experiments.

S: What is it like to run a school?

Mrs P: Everyone should cooperate with each other and help run the school in harmony. Nothing good can come out only by giving orders. As a teacher and a school headmaster I believe in unity.

S: Do you like your job?

Mrs P: If I didn't like it, I wouldn't be a good teacher. I love school and the children of all ages.

S: What do you hope schools will be like in the future?

Mrs P: I dream of schools with big spaces, where children can do activities related to real life; schools that can be close to nature. I believe nature can be an important and interesting teacher for children.

Interview with our teacher

Students: What do you like about teaching?

Mrs Siokou: I like it because every day is different from the previous one and that I can always get new ideas from my students.

S: Which classes and subjects do you teach?

Mrs S: I teach the upper grades on all subjects.

S: What kind of problems do teachers face?

Mrs S: It is very important to find ways to help students cooperate and to help them alleviate their differences in the best possible way.

S: Do you regret the profession you chose?

Mrs S: No. This is why I've served this profession for so many years.

S: If you had the chance to do some other profession, what would that be?

Mrs S: A civil engineer.

Our life in the past

Generally schools in the past didn't have so many lessons as today. Students learned the alphabet, grammar and maths and had plenty of free time to play with each other at their neighborhood. Games that children played at their neighborhood in the past, were very different from those the children play nowadays. In one game children had a stick which they struck with another stick. Then they measured the distance between the two sticks. The one who tossed it very far, was the winner.

Space

People have always wanted to explore space even before modern astronomy revealed the secrets of the Universe. Ancient cultures of Europe observed the starry sky for thousands of years. About 4,000 years ago the Egyptians made calendars by watching the brightest stars of all and smaller stars around it. In 1609, an Italian scientist, named Galileo, was one of the first to see into the sky through a telescope. Since then, a lot of astronomers could do plenty of research and explain a lot of mysteries. In the last decades, space shuttles have been sent to space, and even people have walked on the moon. Modern telescopes in space continue to explore in order to find out more, because we still have a lot to learn.

Eating Habits

Unusual table manners

All countries have customs and traditions, and even unusual table manners. When we hear them, they may seem strange, but if you ever visit a country with such manners, it is good to follow them.

Mexico: If you go there, you cannot eat tacos with cutlery. The Mexicans will think you are rude. It's a good idea to eat with your hands, because they think it is the right way.

Portugal: If you are in a restaurant in Portugal, do not ask for salt or pepper, because it is as if you attack the chef.

Korea: If you decide to go there, you have to watch your behaviour in the restaurant. You cannot start eating your food first, if you are not the oldest son.

Chile: Do not eat your food with your hands, because you will seem rude.

Unhealthy Food

Most kids take to school unhealthy foods, like: chips, chocolate, croissants, cookies, lollipops, doughnuts and cakes! These unhealthy foods create obesity, so we have to avoid them! We have to prefer to take fruits, vegetables, cereals, nuts, dry fruits, toast, handmade cake or cookies!

But for those who prefer to eat a lot of unhealthy food, it's good to have more physical exercise, in this way, they can keep a healthy body! It is preferable to take food, with fewer calories at school!
