Money is the option that is saved most. Surprisingly, time is the most wasted element. Then, water comes the second. Sts do shopping whenever they need so they are not prone to be extravagant. The sts sometimes do shopping even though they dont need to do actually. Clothes then the books are the most preferred options to be bought. When we look at the option, online spending time, the sts sometimes go online and whenever they wish. These two options are equal and mostly preferred options. The number of choosing the option 'not not really' is the least one. The next option, I have a lot of similiar ..... ones is stationery materials. When we think about the age gap, it is not coincidence. The sts replied that they donate the things that are extra. So it seems good news since they do not reaaally throw them. However I dont throw but keep it at home comes the second, so it is also contradictory and we should mull over it. The sts should learn to reuse them differently in their lives. Therefore, the next question about the pile of extras makes sense. Again toys and stationary materias are the ones mostly kept extravagantly.
